LUNAR LANDING

Geometry meets texture in Ann Sacks's Modern line of stoneware tiles. For each 8″ sq. tile in the Ribbed Moon pattern, shown, an arc separates grooved and smooth surfaces, allowing for any number of wall patterns; coordinating tiles come in rectangular and triangular shapes featuring diagonals and criss-crosses. The range of colors includes, at left from top to bottom, Blue Oxygen, Currant, New Lagoon, and Cotton Matte. Ribbed Moon costs $79 per square foot.

WARMING UP
Architect Victor Vasilev brought structural presence to his Flaps radiator system for Antrax. A tall aluminum plate conceals a water-fed heating element while the innovative design doubles as a stylish rack for warming towels and bathrobes. A 14″ w. x 6″ d. x 67.5″ h. version—shown in White, one of more than 200 colors offered—costs $1,890; a larger size is also available. 888-476-3742; imaestri.com

CRYSTAL CLEAR
After failing in her search for an attractive water-filtering system, designer Felicia Ferrone created the Talise fluted glass carafe, which works with store-bought filters. The vessel measures 6″ dia. x 10.5″ h. and costs $160; a smooth glass option is available. fferronedesign.com

SPOT THE DIFFERENCE
New York's Apparatus design studio brings handcrafted appeal to sleek, contemporary shapes with its Cylinder lighting collection. A wall sconce, shown in the Blackened Brass finish, measures 5″ w. x 6″ d. x 9″ h. and costs $1,050. 646-527-9732; apparatusstudio.com
STAR QUALITY

A SOLID GRASP

CUTTING CORNERS

Created to fit at the edge of a kitchen island, the SocialCorner sink by Atlanta-based designer Matthew Quinn for Home Refinements allows two people to work at the same time—while maximizing countertop space. Made of brushed stainless steel, it comes in three sizes and right- and left-corner versions. The 25.5″ sq. x 12″ d. sink, shown, costs $2,750.

NECK DEEP

Sort your cold-weather wraps with Umbra's Pendant scarf organizer, designed to hang from a closet rod or wall hook. Available in square, shown, and triangular shapes, it measures 18″ h. x 18″ w. and holds up to 14 scarves. Its smooth brass-finished surface won't snag delicate fabrics, and it retails for $15.
